October and November are considered as the most proper months for planting hyacinth bulbs in beds, or pots; or for placing them in bulb glasses to blow in water. In beds they require to be planted four inches deep, and six asunder; in pots to be just covered. The bulb glass should be filled with water so far only as that the base of the root be immersed in it, and the water changed once in about three weeks.

The bulbs of tulips may be planted from the latter end of October to the middle of November, about three inches deep and six apart, covering each bulb with a little coarse sand at the time of planting, which is found greatly to improve the appearance of their coats.
